Hongkong, September 12th, 1883.

For some time past a feeling of strong hostility to foreigners has been simmering in the minds of the Canton people. The lamentable shooting affer in Honam, in which one of the French, which we hear is very strong, tended to aggravate this dislike, and the unparticulars of which will be found elseposted up in Canton city proved conclu- spant itself by saven o'clock last night, sively the existence of a strong feeling against foreigners, and the more recent petition addressed to the Vicercy by the Kaifong of Honam praying that the case against the prisoner Logan might be decided forthwith and that he might be hanged, indicated how deeply resentful the Chinese were of the result of that unhappy man's mad outbreak. It is difficult, if not impossible, to get behind the scenes and find out the working of the minds of the rowdies, or those who incited them to violence. Simple hatred of the foreigner is often sufficient to rouse the Chinase to take -part in mob outrages, but outbreaks seldom occur unless the populace have some persons spurring them on to a display of violence which they imagine to be a show of courage. Most fortunately the mob, on this occasion, seems not to have been a bloodthirsty one. but to have been more bent on plunder and fennoclasm than personal violence. lives were lost, though the shouts of Ta were frequent, and no effort was made to take life. Possibly the predatory instinct was more dominant among them, and while they ransacked the houses they slaked their vengeance on the unoffending foreigners by burning their homes. The confusion, too, rather favoured an easy escape, and the fact thirty thousand that no desperate resistance was offered at first, perhaps disarmed the rioters of some of their ferocity. At all events, the satisfactory fact remains that the rioters did not imbrue their hands in blood, and happily we have no repetition of the Tientsin massacre to record

While, however, there is in regard to this regrettable occurrence the gratifying circumstances that no fatality arose from mob violence, the outbreak is a very serious matter, and is unpleasantly suggestive of the perils that may at any moment assail the foreigner resident in China. It might well be thought that, after three-quarters of a century of foreign intercourse the Chinese Authorities would at least be able to restrain the populace from riotous demonstrations and. give proper protection to the foreigners who are led by husiness or other causes to take up their residence in China. It might also be thought that the Chinese people would have rubbed off some of their unfounded prejudices against foreigners. But the event proves that even now there is no real security to life or property for foreigners in the Treaty ports, but that at any moment a few designing persons may be able to stir up popular fury against them, and that the officials, morning, in nineteen cases out of twenty, will prove the Peddar's Wharf yesterday morning when either unwilling or unable to afford protection. SILKWORM DISEASE IN CHINA. The supply of silk which Europe and America derive from China is so important an item in the Hongkong Ice Company's Shares-$160 per commerce of the world, that anything tending to diminish it demands immediate investigation. The derangement to the banking and financial system among the Chinese. which would follow the stoppage of receipts for the value of even one-half the silk that is shipped every year, might seriously affect the whole trade of the country. Some may argue that with short supplies of silk in the north of China the price would be so enhanced that part of the deficiency would be recovered. But that is doubtful. Other silk-cultivating countries would selze the opportunity and stimulate production. The rise in prices here would, therefore, only be short-lived. And if a large part of the China crop was destroyed by disease in the worms, such as afflicted the prowers in the south of Europe a few years since, it is doubtful if the Chinese would show that quick enterprize in repairing the evil which saved the silk industries of Italy and France. We can never say with any feeling of certainty that things in China will turn out as we expect, and perhaps we are wrong in supposing that the officials and gentry would throw hindrances in the way of efficient remedies being applied to ours a disease among the worms, and enable the peasantry to produce silk sufficient to satisfy the wants of the detested foreigner. Any way, time in taking curative measures would be sure to be lost. The matter being one of such great importance to the trade of China, we have lately endosvoured to obtain information regarding the falling off in supplies of silk in late seasons. The cause of the small crop of silk in China during the last three years has been attributed to the presence of the disease known in the silkproducing districts in Europe as La Pebrine The damage done there year by year appeared to get beyond the control of the most skilled silk-rearers, until it become almost accepted as a certainty that there would be small crops of silk in Italy and France. It was, however, at length discovered that the injury arose from disease in the eygs of the silk worm, and it was thought probable that it might be overcome by the importation of fresh seed. Accordingly large quantities of seed were for years purchased in Japan and used to replace the indigenous worms that had become subject to the disease. Petrine has been described as the same thing in the silk worm as consumption in the human body. The complaint is contagious as well as hereditary; the caterpillar suffering from the disease has the power of spinning a coccon, the same warmer. butterfly that comes out of that cocoon has the power of propegating the species by laying an enormous quantity of eggs, but the produce of those eggs will be weakly creatures. And at the time when the caterpillar is mounting in the fourth stage to make its cocoon it will most probably sicken and die, and pro. Barometer..... dose neither silk nor butterfly to continue Phermometer attached solo sto con ero the species. There is some probability that this disease is extending in Chins. Old exports to the trade have known of its existence for several years, but it is only at the present time-when we see crops diminishing so rapidly that an expert of 84, 00 bales in 1880 fell to 54,000 bales in 1881, to 52,000 bales in 1882, and will probably not exceed 30,000 bales in 1883that we begin to realise that the disease may have made greater progress than we had any idea of. We find no allasion to Pebrine in the admirable silk reports published by the Customs two years ago, and the soorelive nature of the Chinese makes it very difficult, to obtain information from them on this or any other subject. But it appears that Chinese seri-oulturists prevent

MPERIAL QUARTO. NGLIBH AND CHINES DICTIONARY WITH THE PUNTI AND MANDARIN PRONUNCIATION. An Anglo-Chinese Dictionary, published at the Daily Press Office, Hongkong.

For comprehensiveness and practical service this Work stands unrivalled. All the new words which the Chinese have of late years been compelled to coin to express the numerous objects in machinery, photography, tolography, and in science generally, which the rapid advance of fereign relations has imposed upon them, are tere given in extenso. Each and every word is fully illustrated and explained, forming exarcises for students of a most instructive nature. Both the Court and Punti pronunciations are given, he tocents being carefully marked on the best rinciple hitherto attained. The typography isplays the success of an attempt to make the Chinese and English type correspond in the size of body, thereby effecting a vast economy of space, schieving a clearness not previously attained, and dispensing with those vast margins and vacant spaces which have heretofore characterized Chinese publications.

To illustrate the vast scope of the work, the following facts are submitted for consideration ;-Chalmers' Vocabulary contains about 16,000 Chinese characters, and Medhurst's English and Chinese Dictionary about 100,000, whilst this work contains more than 50,000 English words, and upwards of 600,000 Chinese characters. Again, despite all the grammars and other elementary works as yet published, the student of this difficult language absolutely requires examples to display the various applications and equivalents of different words which | AND R. TENNENT'S ALE and have one general meaning. Of these examples this work contains more than five times as DAVID CORSAR & SONS' many as any other Dictionary hitherto pub. lished.

For practical purposes the arrangement of the work is so complete, that a reference to its pages enables a person who understands English to communicate effectively with natives who nuderstand nothing but Chinese. In this respect the work will be found indispensable to all Europeans residing in China, and to the natives themselves it explains subjects fully with which very few indeed of them are perfectly acquainted. To parties resident in England and interested in China it cannot but be invaluable occasion. It comprises upwards of two thousand large

No, sir." "It has been very fine to day." Yes, sir. Rually; the only distinguishing point between the above and what we hear at home is that the weather is put last instead of first. Still on the whole, it must be allowed that the Frenchman knows better than we do how to fill up the interval between his being "onchante de vous voir " till the moment that he is "desole de vous quitter." . His features and limbs, too, are so very expressive that be may be said to small-talk with hie evebrows, elbows, and shoulders, in addition to WATER-LILIES. There was quite a grand concourse of epectators at the Amsterdam Zoological Gardens the other day, when the Victoria Regin. which is the queen of all water-lilies, burst into bloom. The date when the famous plant WNSURANCES Effected for Life or Short at Amsterdam is going to produce its flower is known and announced some days before; and, if the curiosity of the Dutch floriculturists goes on increasing as it has done of late, it will pay the milways to run excursion trains from all parts on the appointed day A passion for water-lilies, even of the humbler FIRE MAN. ON CINSURANCE COM. and smaller kinds, seems for some reason or other to be on the increase in other parts of the world besides Holland. Never before this year have so many flower girls been seen APLTAL (FULLY SUBSCRIBED), $1,000,000 with bunches of the white varieties reposing side by side with their baskets of roses and geraniums. Never have the specimens which struggle for existence in the small basin in the Middle Temple detained for so long the admiring glances of passers-by. And in no former year have the humbler sorts, which grow-abundantly in the upper Thames, been so sagerly anapped up by the occupants of rowbonts who pass them in their voyage. Hew girls seem able to resist the temptation of making a detour in search of these trophies. Their eyes are quick to spy the smallest' bud floating timidly above the surface among the broad, plate-like feaves which betray the cliance of their presence; and, even when in the greatest hurry to get home to the fusgiest paterfamilies, they will delay their escorting crew many a precious minute while they are fishing up from the deep and breaking off with outstretched arms the long; slimy stalk of the coveted prize. Perhaps the superior merit which they attach to the white variety is due, like the love of John Leech's masher for flowers, to the idea that "they look so jolly innocent." But they are not at all singular in this toste of theirs, as may be easily proved by investigating the past history of the liking for water-lilles.
